Reene.

Quite a crowd assembled in our streets to-day to see fair play for a young man who had been swindled by three blacklegs, who came in on the train, and commenced a nice little game of three-card monte in the Keene depot. They soon found a victim—a young man who happened to be in the depot—and they soon swindled him out of thirty dollars. They were arrested, and settled the affair by paying back fifteen dollars, dividing the balance between themselves. They left town in double quick time.

The authorities have issued orders to all rum shops to close their bars at nine p. m. through the week, and keep them closed on the Sabbath. We are glad to see even this improvement.

HER ANCESTRY.

The fire alarm sounded Wednesday eve-The fire alarm sounded Wednesday evening and brought out a large crowd of people to see the fire. The lose were placed upon the hydrants, and four streams of water were very quickly playing—not.

Mrs. Wool was descended from a distinguished family. Her ancesstry, if not of noble blood in England, at least belonged to the aristocracy of the country. Her grandfather, Col. Moulton of Connecticut, and a brother, who was a cherevment, setwater were very quickly playing—not, however, to extinguish a fire, but to wet down our very dusty streets, which now look cool and refreshing. Keene has the best water works in the State, and, with the assistance of our well-drilled firemen, any fire can be extinguished in short order.

Keene is in a prosperous condition, and within a short time we hope to see a large and flourishing city. Manufacturing is carried on largely, and is continually on the increase.

A Baptist church, costing about thirty thousand dollars, is to be creeted this season, which will add greatly to the appearson, which will add greatly to the appear and slaking his thirst with the water which he caught in his hat as it descended from the clouds, until finally he was surprised by a party of Hessians and also captured. The meeting between father and son was so affecting that even the British Colonel was moved. Colonel was moved to tears. The who ins

Subsequently Mrs. Wool's father visited Troy, then an insig-nificant village, and being impressed with Nachua was formerly a part of Dunsta-ble, and her citizens, actuated by a filial feeling, propose to join in the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the mother town next October. inficant village, and being impressed with its location and other circumstances favoring the development of a city here, he removed his family to this place. Subse-Gen, R. N. Ratchelder, United States Army, of Manchester, who was chief quartermaster of the army of the Potomac, has been ordered to the division of Colum-bia as chief quartermaster on the staff of Gen. Jefferson C. Davis, who is in comand other edifices in the village. Subsequently, through the bad management of a brother, whom he h d taken into partnership, he lost his property, and shortly afterwards departed this life. Mrs. Moulton, although reared in affluence, being a woman of great executive ability, continued the hotel and succeeded in giving her children the advantages of the best polish and education afforded in those days. The war between the Dutch and the Sultan of Atchin or Acheen, as it is generally put down upon the maps, is being actively prosecuted, according to the latest advices, The Dutch forces, under General Koehler, made a landing on the eastern coast of the Empire. They marched upon the Acheenese, and about the middle of last month assaulted them as they lay entrenched in forts before their capital. After desperate fighting two forts were taken, but the troops were repulsed before the main work, with heavy losses, General Koehler being killed, together with two hundred men. The Dutch made good their position in the forts occupied, and sent their wounded and sick to Padaug, a settlem at on the coast to the southeast of where they were. At the latest advices they were besieging the Sultan's palace, but were meeting with strenters. The war between the Dutch and the Sul-

Sarah N. Moulton was married to John R. Wool, then a young merchant of Troy, in 1810. Dr. Coe, the first pastor of the First Presbyterian church, united the young couple, and resided with them for some time in the two story wooden house just South of Gen. Wool's late residence, where they commenced housekeeping. A fire swent away the fortune of the young merswept away the fortune of the young mer-chant, and the distant rumblings of war turned his thoughts to the profession of arms. Securing a Captain's commission, he soon afterwards found himself on the frontier, in the fore front of the war of 1812, latest advices they were besigging the Sultan's palace, but were meeting with strenuous resistance. Some apprehension is expressed lest the contest should spread all along the coast, accompanied with a guerilla warfare. The country is mountainous, affording many facilities for defensive operations, according to the cut and come again methods of fighting practiced by these Malays. They are a people who are not very courageous in offensive action, but are capable of vindictive retaliation, and will fight with desperate fury when hard pressed. The English residents at Singapore and in the Malay peninsula view the prospect with dismay, as anything like an extended war would seriously obstruct the valuable trade of those regions. may be said to have commenced. Her husband, when not inspecting the distant posts of the army, was stationed in Washington, where Mrs. Wool became one of the most noted of the belles of the Capitol, Her great beauty, her charming wit and vivacity, and, above all, her consideration for the feelings of all with whom she was associated, made her a general favorite. She was admired by all the great men of those days—by Clay, Webster, Cass. Calhoun, Wright, and above all by the celebrated John Randolph. In President Jackson's family she was an informal guest, and it is said exercised a powerful influence over the mind of the hero of New Orleans. It is said that One of the pleasantest occasions which our community has offered in a long time, occurred on Saturday evening last, at the residence of Hon. Charles Dewey, on State street—it being the 26th aniversary of his marriage to Miss Betsey Tarnox. The gathering of a large number of our intelligent and social people, of varying ages and of every sect, would of itself have proved highly interesting; but there were cised a powerful influence over the mind of the hero of New Orleans. It is said that she was one of the most refined and beauti-ful women at the Capital, and that her graces of person were only equaled by the charms of her mind and conversation. These characteristics she retained to the very moment disease laid it s destroying hand upon her. Gen. Wool fairly idelized her, and though he did not survive her he might have said of her with Tennyson: might have said of her with Tennyson:

"Behold her there
As I beheld her ere she knew my heart;
My first, hast love; the idel of no youth,
The darling of my manhood, and alas?"
Now the most blessed memory of mine age!"

Mrs. Wool left no children. The property by the will of Gen. Wool descends to John Wool Griswold and other heirs. The mother of the late Hon. John A. Griswold mother of the late. Hen, John A. Griswold was the sister of Mrs. Wool, and Mrs. Isaac B. Hart is her neice.

We have thus briefly glanced at the life of the deceased, without having spoken of her character as it deserved or of the influence she exerted in society and in politics. This work we leave for other hands. Certainly she was a remarkable woman, and filled a large space in the public life of this country.—moving with her husband in the circles of the greatest of our statesmon and heroes, and always winning the admiration of the learned, the virtuous and the good. She has gone to join her husband in the abode of the blessed, and we doubt not their union is perfect in bliss and joy eternal.

Political journals throughout the West are quite generally pledging themselves to oppose the re-election of any Congresman who voted for the back salary.

The farmers' movement has penetrated the far South, and the Patrons of Hunbandry have organized granges in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

I am also prepared to pay the highest cash price for Potatoes to ship to Market.

intelligent and social people, of varying ages and of every sect, would of itself have proved highly interesting; but there were other considerations connected with the occasion of an umusual and noteworthy character, and especially suggestive in these latter days. Mr. Dewey was born and has always lived in this village. In comparatively early life this union was formed, the fruits of which have been nine children—three sons and six daughters—and all of them residing here and present on this occasion, in good mental and physical health, and giving abundant promise of acting well their respective parts in the world. It was a sight to be proud of—that long row of parents and children, reminding one of days long past! Does any parent shake his head at the thought of such responsibility? If so, let us add, that the good order and discipline of this household have become proverbial; the largest demands of church, of education, and of society generally, have been faithfully met; and yet, so cheerfully have their duties been horne, and so sparingly has time enforced his penalties, that a stranger could with difficulty have distinguished the parents from the older children, We can but believe that the spontaneous feeling of every one present was—all honor to those noble parents, who have done so so much for community, and done it so well.—Montpelier Journal.
